Designer, developer and internet advocate

When we make sites delightful and simple to use, we improve the internet. When someone who has lived the majority of their life without computers even existing can book a trip online, I believe we've accomplished something great.

I strive to achieve this by making sites usable and delightful. By providing insights to the community, I hope to enable others to achieve this as well.

Designer, developer and internet advocate

WHAT I CAN DO

Creative Design

I strive, like all designers, to design beautiful, simple, and memorable sites. The constant stylist evolution of the internet keeps design a compelling challenge.

Javascript

Be it using native Javascript or leveraging a library like jQuery, I greatly enjoy Javascript. Ever more, Javascript is finding a new home improving usability and functionality.

CSS & XHTML

I am highly familiar and adept with CSS & XHTML, having worked with HTML since the age of tables and 1x1 transparent GIFs. I love developing standards adhering, gracefully degrading code.

PHP & MySQL

I've been using LAMP stacks for years, and its given me a fantastic insight into an engineer's perspective. I integrate well with teams, providing designs that not just look great, but are also technically possible.

brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• professional: gives an image of an example of work, along with a brief introduction to himself</li><li>• calm: the gradient blue background isn't too strong and appeals to user's emotions</li><li>• simple: the layout is easy to understand and uncluttered</li></ul> functionality	Lai allows the user to look through his previous work, but it may be hard to evaluate his work since he doesn't provide any links to see his work on a separate page (can only scroll through "feature graphics").
interactivity	There are left and right arrows that allow the user to scroll through Lai's previous work, as well as a button that leads to his blog. Other than that, there's not much the user can explore.
navigation	The user can only navigate between "Portfolio" (homepage), "Blog," and the handful of images that show his past work. For each of these, there are clear buttons.

brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• clean: the page is uncluttered</li><li>• simple: the colors are easy on the user's eyes, even somewhat calming</li><li>• concise: with only 2 images that take up most of the page, the layout is clear and to-the-point</li></ul> functionality	The details that people want are very easy to both see and find. There doesn't seem to be frivolous information.
interactivity	Again, since the site is uncluttered, the user sees few types of elements. However, the ability to expand elements and to hover over images to read descriptions is very helpful.
navigation	Navigation is very easy on this site--there is a very clear navigation bar with easy-to-understand terms. Each page is simple and uncluttered, just like the homepage, which also makes it easy to navigate the site.

brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• simple: a single image with a brief description</li><li>• bold: even though it's simple, the homepage shows that Allday is confident</li><li>• creative: the layout simply looks good even with very limited colors</li></ul> functionality	Some available buttons allow the user to see what Allday has to offer, and the most prominent button that says, "read on" encourages the user to do so.
interactivity	The prominent button has an arrow pointing right that directs the user to the next page (simple pages that give brief descriptions of what Allday has to offer). Certain areas of the prominent button on each page cannot be clicked.
navigation	On each page there is only a right button, no left one. User has to either click the "back" button on browser to return to previous pages or click on the link to the homepage at the top of the page.

Here are some of the latest projects
I've been working on.

Sept 2011

Project: Porter Robinson - College Invasion Tour | Commisioned By: Eyewax

Accent Creative, <http://www.accent.tv/>, 01/15/2012

type	fixed sidebar
brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• creative: a lot of projects are displayed for the user to explore past works. Even the way they are displayed is creative</li><li>• appealing: the projects that are shown would be appealing to groups, companies, etc., looking for an eye-catching design</li><li>• young: the site seems more geared towards younger people (maybe late teens to twenties)</li></ul> functionality	The sidebar allows users to see the projects without having to look around too much interactivity	The shortcuts are highlighted red-orange when the user hovers of them.
navigation	Navigation is easy because the layout features a fixed sidebar. There's no need for the user to search around for buttons, etc.

Serial Cut

serial cut, <http://www.serialcut.com/>, 01/15/2012

brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• fun: lots of colors and a full screen image that portrays many cheerful things</li><li>• creative: making it look like objects are flying out of the car is a great idea and gets the idea of the ad across</li><li>• colorful: eye-catching vibrant colors draw user's attention</li></ul> functionality	The site does a good job of showing off the projects the company has done (ads, etc.)
interactivity	There's a fixed sidebar that is hard to see on certain pages (all pages have a full-screen photo, but some have dark backgrounds) because the shortcuts/links are dark. In the gallery with all projects, hovering over the image displays the name of the product in the ad, etc.
navigation	The fixed sidebar displays the latest projects, but to see past projects takes a few more clicks.

type	headline & gallery
brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• diverse: Skillicorn has displayed his projects in a gallery form, which shows that he's worked on projects in very different areas</li><li>• simple: the site is easy to follow and understand (little or no guessing needed)</li><li>• thorough: Skillicorn has very clear descriptions to accompany the work in his portfolio</li></ul> functionality	The site does a good job of showing that Skillicorn pays close attention to detail, and allows for users and customers to understand his approach.
interactivity	Projects can be viewed either by clicking on their corresponding images on the homepage or by clicking on the gallery. Clicking on images displays images as enlarged. Text is very small throughout website (descriptions, shortcuts, etc.
Navigation	It's easy to open up a project page from the homepage, but users cannot browse through the projects (no arrow buttons, etc., and the "Browse" link doesn't work).

Emotions by Mike

Emotions by Mike,

brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• fun: bright, eye-catching colors</li><li>• quirky: comical aspects in past works</li><li>• clear: it's obvious what everything on the site is for (good labels)</li></ul> functionality	The site does a good job of displaying Mike's work--thumbnails labeled with the media type (web, logo, etc.)
interactivity	Clicking on a thumbnail displays enlarged image.

Couch Kumaras

VIDEOS ABOUT CONTACT

type	featured graphic
brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• simple: there are only three buttons that the user will use to navigate between pages</li><li>• plain: plain colors throughout, which gives the site character</li><li>• friendly: no clutter whatsoever, and clear buttons</li></ul> functionality	The portfolio simply displays past works, tells users a little about the company, and gives people a way to contact. All very concise.
Interactivity	The site only has three buttons to click, all of which are very big and clear. (No hovering, highlighting, etc., necessary.)
navigation	Again, with only three buttons, the site is very easy to navigate. Also, each of the three pages has the three buttons in the same spots. The only issue is that there's no "Home" button, but maybe that's because the only things on the homepage are the three buttons and the logo.

brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• fun: simple background but nice, colorful display/layout</li><li>• childish: the colors and a lot of the graphics would appeal to children</li><li>• professional: even though this site has an accent of youth, the clarity shows a very professional side</li></ul> functionality	The site is successful in displaying past projects, which show an extreme level of creativity.
interactivity	Hovering over any part of a product image, its surrounding border, or its button causes the "View Product" button to turn pink to indicate that clicking will expand that product's information/details.
navigation	The site never leaves the homepage, but rather opens up a new section above the gallery of products when a product is clicked on. This new section provides the user with product information/details, and can be close by clicking on a circle at the top of the section (that turns pink when hovered over).

Hello, my name is Chris Merritt.

I like to paint with pixels, share my thoughts in 140 characters or less, pretend to be a photographer, keep up with my friends, and laugh at funny stuff. Why don't you say hi?

I Am Chris Merritt

type	text only
brand	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• dark: the dark background allows for the large text to really pop out</li><li>• witty: not having any images is almost like daring the user to click on the colored words</li><li>• direct: with no images, headline, etc., the user is forced to read the large text</li></ul> functionality	The user may not be able to completely understand what the site has to offer based on only the homepage. However, once the user clicks on the hyperlinked text, it is very clear what the site aims to show.
Interactivity	There's a search bar on one of the pages, which might be helpful to the user if he or she is interested in that page ("funny stuff"). Other than that, there isn't much interactivity.
navigation	Navigation is easy on this site if the user is familiar with what pages the text on the homepage refer to. First-timers will probably click on the different text links to find out what Chris Merritt is referring to (his Facebook, Twitter, etc.)
